DISCOVER FALL FOLIAGE AND LEARN SOMETHING NEW ALONG THE WAY ON A ROAD SCHOLAR ADVENTURE

BOSTON (September 10, 2012) — For an in-depth peek at the vibrant colors of autumn, Road Scholar offers educational adventures this fall that combine learning with exploring New England's stunning natural beauty.

Participants will explore picturesque countrysides and learn about the history and culture that are the foundation of the American experience. Programs feature lectures by local historians, naturalists and other experts.

Celebrating the Autumn Tapestry and History of New Hampshire

Explore the incredible beauty of southern New Hampshire as you journey through the breathtaking autumn tapestry of the Monadnock region. Immerse yourself in the history and stories of the people who have made this mountainous region their home during field trips to the historic towns of Harrisville, Nelson and Jaffrey.

The Nature of Vermont: Walking and Canoeing in the Northeast Kingdom

The spectacular Northeast Kingdom of Vermont — decked out in vibrant autumn colors — is the setting for a hiking and canoeing adventure. Get up close to this unspoiled area's natural environment, culture, customs and history amid New England's fall foliage while hiking farm roads and trails. Hone your paddling technique and learn about the region's unique ecology as you canoe pristine lakes and rivers.

On the Road: The Best Fall Foliage in New England

Journey the backroads and byways of New England to experience the best of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont during a fall foliage adventure through the region's most picturesque countryside and into the history and culture that are the foundation of the American experience.
